Course Description:
This course introduces graduate students to major perspectives, problems and debates and in modern historiography. We will consider fundamental epistemological questions regarding the discipline, such as the nature of sources and the question of objectivity; major schools of interpretation, from Marxism to post-colonial theory; and the impact of new methods and technologies upon the historical profession. Students are encouraged to relate course concepts to their own fields of study and research projects.

Readings:
The books listed below are required and available for purchase at the campus bookstore or via Amazon. All other readings, indicated by an asterisk (*), are available on eCampus, which can be accessed by logging on at ecampus.wvu.edu. I reserve the right to adjust readings according to the direction of the course.

Assignments:

Writing assignments (45%): Over the course of the semester, you will write two papers – a midterm and a final – of approximately 6-8 pages, in response to a prompt distributed ahead of time. The midterm is worth 20% and the final is worth 25% of your overall grade.

Online Posts (25%): By NOON every Wednesday, students must post three questions or comments regarding the week’s readings to the eCampus discussion board. These should not be informational questions (e.g. “What does Marx mean by the proletariat?”), but rather analytical and critical. They should identify aspects of the readings that require clarification, debate or dissection. Each week’s response will be graded, and at the end of term your lowest grade will be dropped. You can earn additional points by commenting on your peers’ posts.

Article presentation (10%) – Over the course of the semester, each student will be required to lead discussion of an assigned article. This will involve a 5-10 minute presentation to frame the reading, posing questions to frame our conversation, and coordination of discussion.

Reflection Assignments (5%): At the beginning of the semester, you will write a reflection on the themes of the course; you will then revisit this paper towards the end of term and write another piece reflecting on how your ideas have evolved over the semester. The two assignments will then be submitted and graded together at the end of the semester.

Attendance and participation (15%): Attendance is required; you should also be sure to come to class on time, prepared, with the readings in hand, and ready to contribute in a constructive fashion to our discussion. If you will be missing class due to illness etc., please email me ahead of time.

Course Expectations:

Assignments: The papers must be submitted in HARD COPY and stapled – not sent via email. It should be double-spaced, with 1-inch margins and in 12-point font. Late papers will be deducted half a grade for every day of lateness, beginning at the time at which they are due. No extensions will be given.

Communication: I will often communicate with the class via your WVU email account (MIX). Please be sure to check it regularly. Email is also the best way to contact me. When emailing, please be ensure that you are polite and professional; an unpunctuated
Blackberry message with no salutation will not be answered. I will work hard to get back to you in a timely manner.

Courteous during Class: It is disruptive to others to arrive late to class or leave early. Please don’t do it. If you know that you will have to leave class early, explain the situation to me beforehand and sit near the door so that you can exit as quietly as possible. Please turn off all cell phones, beepers, or any other wireless device that may make noise during class. I will confiscate your device if it rings in class. You may use laptops in class for taking notes, but if you are using it for email, instant-messaging, or any other activity I will ask you to stop using your computer.

Academic Integrity: Plagiarism and other forms of academic dishonesty will be dealt with severely. At a minimum, offenders will fail the course. Plagiarism means “submitting, without appropriate acknowledgement, a report, notebook, speech, outline, theme, thesis, dissertation, or other written, visual, or oral material that has been copied in whole or in part from the work of others, whether such source is published or not, including (but not limited to) another individual’s academic composition, compilation, or other product, or commercially prepared paper” (WVU Undergraduate Catalog, 2003-2005, p. 47). Plagiarism includes not only lifting passages word for word without using quotation marks (even if you cite the author!), but also the substantial use of anyone else’s ideas without citing them. Using material from the World Wide Web without citing it is plagiarism. Your work is made stronger, not weaker, by showing that you are able to refer to the work of others and comment upon it critically. Whenever you use material word for word, you must use quotation marks and cite the proper author.

Writing Center: Writing is one of the most important skills in this course. You are encouraged to use the WVU Writing Center to help improve your papers. More information on the Writing Center’s resources can be found via a link on the course eCampus page.

Statement of Social Justice: The West Virginia University community is committed to creating and fostering a positive learning and working environment based on open communication, mutual respect, and inclusion. If you are a person with a disability and anticipate needing any type of accommodation in order to participate in this class, please advise me and make appropriate arrangements with the Office of Disability Services (293-6700).
